This case, involving issues of a company's right to receive an incoming bid for property held in escrow, involved factors (plaintiff) typical of those found in the resolution of similar disputes. Once again, however, a definite lesson must be learned that cannot be learned from any of the litigated cases. An otherwise good bid might never be accepted if the bidding company attempts to "outdo" the plaintiff. The court, in this case, did not accept the plaintiff's bid, but did accept the defendant's bid, which was $1,000 less than the plaintiff's bid. The defendant's bid was accepted, notwithstanding the plaintiff's bid, because the defendant's bid was the only bid received during the bidding process. The lesson taught here is that a company should not bid on a property held in escrow, unless it is willing to accept the bid if it is the only bid received, and bid no more than the maximum amount it is willing to pay for the property. The court, in this case, did accept the defendant's bid, but only because the defendant's bid was the only bid received.
