Science SOL 4.3- Ecosystems

Definition: An ecosystem is made up of interacting parts that affect the survival of others and bring forth change over a specific time scale. Ecosystems are dynamic.

Ecosystems and their characteristics are the result of complex interactions among living organisms, the physical environment, and the flow of energy and matter. Ecosystems are dynamic, meaning they change over time.

The Four Basic Ecosystems:

- The four basic ecosystems are aquatic and terrestrial. Aquatic ecosystems are found in water, and terrestrial ecosystems are found on land.
- The biotic (living) components of an ecosystem include all the organisms that live in the ecosystem.
- The abiotic (non-living) components of an ecosystem include all the physical and chemical factors that affect the organisms.

Energy & Matter:

Energy: The energy of the sun is the source of all energy in the ecosystem. The energy flows from the sun to the producers (plants) and then to the consumers (animals).

Matter: Matter is recycled in the ecosystem. It flows from the producers to the consumers and then back to the producers.

Interactions:

- Producers (plants) use photosynthesis to convert sunlight into energy.
- Consumers (animals) eat producers or other consumers to get energy.
- Decomposers (fungi and bacteria) break down dead organisms and return nutrients to the soil.

Changes:

Ecosystems can change over time. This can happen because of natural events (like fires or hurricanes) or because of human actions (like deforestation or pollution).
