Flow of Energy

The Flow of Energy

Herbivore Scavenger Hunt

Energy is the ability to do work. All living things need energy to do work. They need to grow, develop, reproduce. That is part of every living cycle. But where do they get the energy to do all this work? Do all living organisms get energy from the same place?

Producers:
Every food chain begins with a producer. Plants are producers. They make their own food, which creates energy for them to grow, reproduce and survive. No other living thing can make their own food makes them unique; they are the only living things on Earth that can make their own source of food energy. Of course, it takes energy to make food. Plants need energy from the sun, water and air to survive. Choose these three essential ingredients. Then a healthy plant will begin the food chain.

Use the word bank will correctly complete the sentence.

There are many different types of organisms in the world. Some are producers and some are consumers. Some are decomposers.
