

3.6 Mention any two phenomena during the G1 phase of Interphase.

Answer: In G1 phase following events occur:

1. Cell organelles double.
2. RNA, proteins are synthesized.

3.7 Explain the process of segmentation with the help of a proper example of plants.

Answer: Segmentation is the process of dividing a larger structure or organism into smaller, distinct parts. In the case of plants, segmentation occurs at various levels of organization, from the cellular level to the whole plant.

At the cellular level, plant cells are divided into different types based on their functions. For example, leaf cells are different from stem cells, and root cells have different functions from those in the flower. This differentiation and specialization of cells is critical for plant growth and development.

For example, let's consider the segmentation of a flowering plant like a rose. The rose plant has distinct organs like roots, stems, leaves, and flowers. The roots are responsible for anchoring the plant in the soil and absorbing water and nutrients. The stem supports the plant and transports water and nutrients from the roots to the rest of the plant. The leaves are responsible for photosynthesis, and the flowers are responsible for reproduction.

3.8 What is the importance of genetic counseling in arranging a marriage?

Answer: The genetic counseling has been defined as the process by which patients or relatives at risk of a hereditary disorder are advised of the consequences of the disorder, and the probability of developing and transmitting it and the ways in which this may be prevented or ameliorated.

The genetic counselors, after detecting the genetic state of the couples, may advise them for the risk they bear for producing a child with genetic disorder. Therefore, genetic counseling helps to prevent or reduce the genetic load in the population.
