Twenty one years after his wife and daughter were murdered in the bombing of a plane over Scotland Alan Tealing a university lecturer still does not know the truth of what really happened on that terrible night. Obsessed by the details of what he has come to call The Case he is sure that the man convicted of the atrocity was not responsible and that he himself has thus been deprived not only of justice but also of any chance of escape from his enduring grief. When an American intelligence officer apparently terminally ill and determined to settle his own accounts before death arrives on his doorstep with information about a key witness in the trial a fateful sequence of events is set in motion. Alan decides that he must travel to Australia to confront this witness whose evidence he has always disbelieved in the hope that this might at last be the breakthrough for which he has waited so long. News of the Dead James Robertson, 2021-08-05 WINNER OF THE WALTER SCOTT PRIZE FOR HISTORICAL FICTION To tell the story of a country or a continent is surely a great and complex undertaking but the story of a quiet unnoticed place where there are few people fewer memories and almost no reliable records a place such as Glen Conach may actually be harder to piece together The hazier everything becomes the more whatever facts there are become entangled with myth and legend Deep in the mountains of north east Scotland lies Glen Conach a place of secrets and memories fable and history In particular it holds the stories of three different eras separated by centuries yet linked by location by an ancient manuscript and by echoes that travel across time In ancient Pictland the Christian hermit Conach contemplates God and nature performs miracles and prepares himself for sacrifice Long after his death legends about him are set down by an unknown hand in the Book of Conach Generations later in the early nineteenth century self promoting antiquarian Charles Kirkliston Gibb is drawn to the Glen and into the big house at the heart of its fragile community In the present day young Lachie whispers to Maja of a ghost he thinks he has seen Reflecting on her long life Maja believes him for she is haunted by ghosts of her own News of the Dead is a captivating exploration of refuge retreat and the reception of strangers It measures the space between the stories people tell of themselves what they forget and what they invent and the stories through which they may or may not be remembered
