- Prior studies have specific gene name gene clusters. The best line strategy looks for those same known genes across the 10 lines. Throughout the plot, the expression of a cluster frequently occurs with substantial fluctuations (e.g. 10). Plotted by cluster, the expression of the cluster is highly correlated with the expression of other genes within the cluster.

- Many cultures of chameleons have unique coloration patterns that have developed to serve as camouflage. Many of these species have a bright red coloration on their upper bodies, but also have dark brown or reddish brown coloration on their lower bodies. This allows the lizard to remain relatively camouflaged when it is resting on a tree branch. It is thought that this coloration may also be used to attract mates, and may also help to keep the lizard from becoming an easy target for predators.

- Localisation ... efforts to promote the digitising of the press with a specific local news site often with community editorial teams, which can be joined or incorporated with the publishing, the publication's always available online in an edition. The distribution can be done from local news sites that have made arrangements for Channel Four's Local News content.
- Super Page ... this is an online edition where stories from different news sites are brought together on the super page and integrated in a monthly theme section. It is a strategy to differentiate itself from news from elsewhere, local papers and local news sites.
