

Animal Farm

Chapter Summaries

Chapter 1

- Mr. Jones, the owner of Manor Farm, is criticised in the very first paragraph. He is excessively "drunk" and "he lurched across the yard".
- This contrasts strongly with the feeling of anticipation and excitement as the animals gather to hear the dream of "old Major ... a majestic-looking pig".
- Orwell already suggests the pigs as power-hungry, greedy monsters as they settle down "in the straw immediately in front of the platform" where old Major is ensconced. So already it appears that some animals are more equal than others.
- To this first meeting of the animals in the barn, Orwell brings a gentle, warm quality, mixing whimsically with a dash of absurdity.

Chapter 2

- In the first paragraph of this chapter old Major dies. By the end of the chapter when the pigs steal all the milk for themselves, the corruption is already entrenched.
- The animals, led by the pigs, hold "secret meetings in the barn" to keep old Major's message alive, and when Mr. Jones falls into a drunken stupor and neglects to feed the animals for days, the hungry animals rebel and expel "Man" from "Man-or" Farm.
- To remind them of their tormentors, the farmhouse is unanimously declared a museum. Ironically, a situation which Orwell knew only too well, this memorial to their former oppressors (Jones and Co) will become the home of their new oppressors (the pigs). In other words: Corruption merely breeds corruption.
- Old Major's resolutions are painted on a wall "in great white letters" and the animals are deceived into believing that these Seven Commandments form "an unalterable law by which all the animals on Animal Farm must live for ever after".
