Major Battles of the American Revolution

The American Revolution was a pivotal period in American history when thirteen American colonies fought for their independence from British rule. Throughout this challenging and transformative time, several major battles occurred, each with its unique significance and location.

Battle of Lexington and Concord

The American Revolution officially began on April 19, 1775, with the Battle of Lexington and Concord. This battle took place in Massachusetts, a colony in New England. British troops were sent to seize colonial weapons and arrest patriot leaders. However, Paul Revere's famous midnight ride alerted the American militia, who confronted the British in these two small towns. Although it was a relatively small skirmish, it marked the start of the American Revolution and symbolized the colonists' determination to resist British control.

Battle of Bunker Hill

The Battle of Bunker Hill occurred on June 17, 1775, near Boston, Massachusetts. The American militia, led by Colonel William Prescott, fortified Breed's Hill and faced British forces under General Thomas Gage. Despite the eventual British victory, the battle showed that the American colonists could stand up to the British Army. The famous line "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes" is associated with this battle.
