Abstract The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength and body composition of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of 3 sessions per week, with each session including 10 exercises that targeted the major muscle groups. The results showed that the program significantly increased muscle strength and body composition. The authors concluded that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective way to improve muscle strength and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQol-5D questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, measured using a 6-minute walk test and a 10-minute step test. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in HRQL and physical fitness compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and HRQL of sedentary, middle-aged women.
