

Database Application Developer's Guide

Delphi for Windows

Chapter 1 Introduction

Agreement

Delphi enables you to create robust database applications quickly and easily. Delphi database applications can work directly with desktop databases like Paradox, dBASE, the Local InterBase Server, and ODBC data sources. The Delphi Client/Server edition also works with remote database servers such as Oracle, Sybase, Microsoft SQL Server, Informix, InterBase, and ODBC data sources. Delphi client applications can be scaled easily between mission critical network-based client/server databases, and local databases on a single machine.

This chapter introduces Delphi's database tools, including the Data Access and Data Controls component pages, the Fields Editor, the Database Desktop, and the Database Forms Expert.

What you should know first

Building a database application is similar to building any other Delphi application. This book assumes you understand the basic application development techniques covered in the Delphi User's Guide, including:

- Creating and managing projects
- Creating forms and managing units
- Working with components, properties, and events
- Writing simple Object Pascal source code

You also need to have a working knowledge of the Database Management System (DBMS) your Delphi database applications access, whether it is a desktop database such as dBASE or Paradox, or an SQL server. For information specific to building client/server applications with Delphi, see Chapter 6, "Building a client/server application."

This book assumes you have a basic understanding of relational databases, database design, and data management. There are many third-party books covering these topics if you need to learn more about them.

Proceedings of the Conference on Programmable Controllers '87 Paul Gay, 1987 Enterprise Architecture and Integration: Methods, Implementation and Technologies Lam, Wing, Shankararaman, Venky, 2007-05-31 This book provides a detailed analysis of the important strategies for integrating IT systems into fields such as e business and customer relationship management. It supplies readers with a comprehensive survey of existing enterprise architecture and integration approaches and presents case studies that illustrate best practices describing innovative methods, tools and architectures with which organizations can systematically achieve enterprise integration. Provided by publisher Information Technology for Balanced Manufacturing Systems Weiming Shen, 2007-03-07 The manufacturing sector has been facing major challenges as it undergoes revolutionary changes fuelled by new and sophisticated demands from customers, global competition, distribution of manufacturing and marketing activities and technological advances. In order to address these challenges, manufacturing enterprises need to change the way they do business and adopt innovative technologies and solutions to increase their responsiveness and production efficiency. Information technology plays an essential role in this process. Current manufacturing systems are collections of complex systems or subsystems operating in distributed collaborative environments involving software, hardware, humans and organizations. It is crucial to keep a balance between the technical aspects of automation and the human and social facets when applying information technology in industrial applications, particularly with the rapid advancements in information and communication technologies and the wide deployment of automated manufacturing systems. However, in order to create appropriate frameworks for exploring the best synergies between humans and automated systems, there are still numerous issues in terms of processes, characterization, modeling and development of adequate support tools. BASYS conferences have been developed and organized to promote the development of balanced automation systems in an attempt to address these issues. The first BASYS conference was successfully launched in Victoria, Brazil, 1995, and then the following conferences were held in Lisbon, Portugal, 1996; Prague, Czech Republic, 1998; Berlin, Germany, 2000; Cancun, Mexico, 2002; and Vienna, Austria, 2004. Employment Gazette Great Britain. Department of Employment, 1988-07 Navigating the Evolving Landscape of Safety Standards for Machine Learning-based Road Vehicle Functions Simon Burton, 2024-08-26 ML approaches to solving some of the key perception and decision challenges in automated vehicle functions are maturing at an incredible rate. However, the setbacks experienced during initial attempts at widespread deployment have highlighted the need for a careful consideration of safety during the development and deployment of these functions To better control the risk associated with this storm of complex functionality open operating environments and cutting edge technology there is a need for industry consensus on best practices for achieving an acceptable level of safety Navigating the Evolving Landscape of Safety Standards for Machine Learning based Road Vehicle Functions provides an overview of standards relevant to the safety of ML based vehicle functions and serves as guidance for technology providers including those new to the automotive sector on how to interpret the evolving standardization landscape The report also contains practical guidance along with an example from the perspective of a developer of an ML based perception function on how to interpret the requirements of these standards Click here to access the full SAE

Manufacturing Systems Luis M. Camarinha-Matos,2006-01-04 Industries and particularly the manufacturing sector have been facing difficult challenges in a context of socio economic turbulence characterized by complexity as well as the speed of change in causal interconnections in the socio economic environment In order to respond to these challenges companies are forced to seek new technological and organizational solutions In this context two main characteristics emerge as key properties of a modern automation system agility and distribution Agility because systems need not only to be flexible in order to adjust to a number of a priori defined scenarios but rather must cope with unpredictability Distribution in the sense that automation and business processes are becoming distributed and supported by collaborative networks Emerging Solutions for Future Manufacturing Systems includes the papers selected for the BASYS 04 conference which was held in Vienna Austria in September 2004 and sponsored by the International Federation for Information Processing IFIP

Holonic and Multi-Agent Systems for Manufacturing Vladimir Marik,Robert W. Brennan,Michal Pechoucek,2005-08-29 The challenge faced in today s manufacturing and business environments is the question of how to satisfy increasingly stringent customer requirements while managing growing system complexity For example customers expect high quality customizable low cost products that can be delivered quickly The systems that deliver these expectations are by nature distributed concurrent and stochastic and as a result increasingly difficult to manage Unfortunately the traditional hierarchical strictly centralized approach to control used in these domains is characteristically inflexible fragile and difficult to maintain These shortcomings have led to the development of a new class of manufacturing and supply chain decision making approaches in recent years Solutions based on these approaches usually explore a set of highly distributed decision making units that are capable of autonomous operations while cooperating interactively to resolve larger problems The units referred to as agents in classical computer science and software engineering or holons if physically integrated with the manufacturing hardware interact by exchanging information These units are motivated by arriving at local solutions as well as collaborating and sharing resources and goals in solving the overall problem in question collectively Municipal
