Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of older adults with mild cognitive impairment (MCI). The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 15) participated in a 12-week walking program, while the control group (n = 15) did not. The walking program was designed to be low-intensity and supervised. The primary outcome was the change in the Mini-Mental State Examination (MMSE) score. Secondary outcomes included changes in the Beck Depression Inventory (BDI), the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS), and the Physical Activity Scale for the Elderly (PASE). The MMSE score increased significantly in the walking group compared to the control group. The BDI and GDS scores decreased significantly in the walking group compared to the control group. The PASE score increased significantly in the walking group compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of older adults with MCI.
