Allergy Guide For Schools:

Childhood Food Allergy: Current Management, Emerging Therapies, and Prevention, An Issue of Pediatric Clinics Ruchi Gupta, 2016-01-07 Dr Gupta provides a comprehensive overview of the clinical management of food allergy. Articles are devoted to epidemiology, pathophysiology, diagnosis, management, immunology, and treatments of food allergy. Current knowledge of the relationship between the gut microbiome and food allergy is also presented, as well as eosinophilic esophagitis and oral allergy syndrome. Food Allergens Tong-Jen Fu, Lauren S. Jackson, Kathiravan Krishnamurthy, Wendy Bedale, 2017-11-16 This volume identifies gaps in the assessment, management, and communication of food allergen risks. Chapters showcase best practices in managing allergen risks at various stages of the food chain, including during food manufacture, processing, during food preparation in food service, retail food establishments, and in the home, and at the point of consumption. The authors highlight key legislative initiatives that are in various stages of development and implementation at the federal, state, and community levels. Finally, the volume includes recommendations for ways to build and strengthen education and outreach efforts at the food industry, government, institutional, and community levels. Chapters come from an array of experts, including researchers and key stakeholders from government, the food industry, retail food service groups, and consumer groups. The information presented will facilitate the development of educational materials and allergen management training programs for food production and service staff, extension specialists, and government inspectors. Consumers and other food safety professionals will also benefit from information on food allergen control measures that have been put in place across the food chain. Food Allergies: a Recipe for Success at School Jan Hanson, 2012-09-10 Too many children are having allergic reactions and anaphylaxis at school, often as a result of a lack of preparation and understanding. Programs U S Department of Health and Human Serv, 2015-06-27 Food allergies are a growing food safety and public health concern that affect an estimated 4% 6% of children in the United States 1 2 Children with food allergies are two to four times more likely to have asthma or other allergic conditions than those without food allergies 1 The prevalence of food allergies among children increased 18% during 1997 2007 and allergic reactions to foods have become the most common cause of anaphylaxis in community health settings In 2006 about 88% of schools had one or more students with a food allergy Staff who work in schools and early care and education ECE programs should develop plans for how they will respond effectively to children with food allergies Although the number of children with food allergies in any one school or ECE program may seem small allergic reactions can be life threatening and have far reaching effects on children and their families as well as on the schools or ECE programs they attend Any child with a food allergy deserves attention and the school or ECE program should create a plan for preventing an allergic reaction and responding to a food allergy emergency Studies show that 16% 18% of children with food allergies have had a reaction from accidentally eating food allergens while at school In addition 25% of the severe and potentially life threatening reactions anaphylaxis reported at schools happened in children with no previous diagnosis of food allergy School and ECE program staff should be ready to address the needs of children with known food allergies They also should be prepared to respond effectively to the emergency needs of children who are not known to have food allergies but who exhibit allergic signs and symptoms Until now no national guidelines had been developed to help schools and ECE programs address the needs of the growing numbers of children with food allergies However 14 states and many school districts have formal policies or guidelines to improve the management of food allergies in schools Many schools and ECE programs have implemented some of the steps needed to manage food allergies effectively 4 Yet systematic planning for managing the risk of food allergies and responding to food allergy emergencies in schools and ECE programs remain incomplete and inconsistent
