

Examine the finch's beak. The upper mandible is the top part of the beak. The lower mandible is the bottom part of the beak. The beak is made of keratin, a protein that is also found in human hair and nails. The beak is used for eating, drinking, and building nests. The shape and size of the beak vary among different species of finches. This variation is due to natural selection, where finches with beaks that are better suited to their environment survive and reproduce more successfully.
