A nurse is planning care for a client who is experiencing the Somogyi effect and takes intermittent-acting insulin. Which of the following actions should the nurse include in the plan?

- A) Move the evening intermediate-acting dose to 90 min. before dinner
- B) Increase the client's morning caloric intake
- C) Omit the client's evening snack
- D) Monitor the client's nighttime blood glucose levels - ANSWER D) Monitor the client's nighttime blood glucose levels

The Somogyi effect describes a high blood glucose level in the morning after an extremely low blood glucose level during the night.
