

Purpose

To compare your model of the atom with the model of the atom proposed by the Bohr model.

Step 1: Using Mathematics for Acoustic Properties

In this step, you will use the mathematics of the Bohr model to calculate the frequency of the sound waves that would be produced by the atom. The Bohr model of the atom is based on the assumption that the electron moves in a circular orbit around the nucleus. The frequency of the sound waves is given by the equation:

$$f = \frac{v}{\lambda} = \frac{v}{2\pi r} \quad \text{where } v \text{ is the speed of sound, } \lambda \text{ is the wavelength, and } r \text{ is the radius of the orbit.}$$

Using the equation, calculate the frequency of the sound waves that would be produced by the atom. Show your work.

It is assumed that the frequency of the sound waves is equal to the frequency of the electron's motion.

Step 2: In this step, you will use the mathematics of the Bohr model to calculate the frequency of the sound waves that would be produced by the atom. The Bohr model of the atom is based on the assumption that the electron moves in a circular orbit around the nucleus. The frequency of the sound waves is given by the equation:

Using the equation, calculate the frequency of the sound waves that would be produced by the atom. Show your work.

It is assumed that the frequency of the sound waves is equal to the frequency of the electron's motion.

Step 3: The Bohr model of the atom is based on the assumption that the electron moves in a circular orbit around the nucleus. The frequency of the sound waves is given by the equation:

Using the equation, calculate the frequency of the sound waves that would be produced by the atom. Show your work.

It is assumed that the frequency of the sound waves is equal to the frequency of the electron's motion.

the electroweak vector boson fusion VBF component As the first observation of VBF at a hadron collider this measurement demonstrated new techniques to reliably extract VBF processes and paved the way for future VBF Higgs measurements The first phenomenological study developed a new technique for identifying the colour of heavy resonances produced in proton proton collisions As a by product of this study an unexpected and previously unnoticed correlation was discovered between the probability of correctly identifying a high energy top and the colour structure of the event it was produced in The second phenomenological study explored this relationship in more detail and could have important consequences for the
