and extensive research has been done. They believe the general public would want to be involved. Should not members themselves, people proud of their progress (including members of other organizations) be approached?

Opinions should come from the more advanced members. This committee will be responsible for developing a written strategy for action.

Please give comments, positive and negative, on how best these more advanced members, particularly women, with an entrepreneurial background, who have developed, taught, and written, possibly innovative programs on their basis and experience, should be used for the organization itself. They could be approached from many angles, and the organization could benefit by having entrepreneurs, business leaders, and a variety of other people at a meeting.

One final comment: Many people outside advertising organizations are often skeptical, and even antagonistic, concerning the role of women in advertising. We must be prepared to defend our position.
