about the topic? What information is the author giving? What does the author believe? Determine the author's purpose. What does the writer want you to know? Why is the writer...

Compare and Contrast Different Versions of a Text

How is one version of a text different from another? How is a version written differently from the written version? Think about the similarities and differences of each.

Compare the Versions: Other claims in the author writing it can also prove the same and different versions.

The Impact of Word Choices on Meaning and Tone

Author's choice of words can affect the meaning of the text.

Figurative Language: words and phrases that have a meaning other than their meaning.

Connotative Meaning: emotional responses to words, positive, negative.

Technical Words: domain-specific words that may make reading more difficult.

Author Authors Don't Agree

Why Don't Authors Agree?

Authors may write different texts about topics that have different points of view. Why?

1. different facts
2. same facts, different interpretation.

Locate the Central Idea

Ask yourself, "What does the author want me to remember?" Think about what makes the text a central idea. Look for key parts that explain the central idea through the text. Then, ask, does the author mean this the central idea?

Text Structure

How does the author organize their writing?

Classification: one thing leads to another.

Procedural/Explanatory: defines and describes a process or gives a solution.

Descriptive: pictures.

Compare/Contrast: similarities and differences.

Definition: defines, explains.

SUMMARIZING: SORRY, IT'S NOT ABOUT YOU

An summary is about the facts, not about your opinions. When you summarize, think about the central idea. Turn that central idea into a topic sentence. After that, tell about the other important ideas in the text.
