Employees must answer to the CEO, who is usually responsible for completing the Accountability Statement. This may be done in many ways. For example, employees may bring the CEO to work as a consultant or bring to the employees' team immediate access to the information without having to wait until after the meeting and follow up to establish the right answer to the CEO. In the case of a power struggle, where employees' Power is high, employees may need to bring with a personal responsibility for the information. In the case of a low Power, the employees may need to be motivated to bring the information, and the CEO may need to be motivated to accept the information.
