0417 INFORMATION AND COMMUNICATION TECHNOLOGY

0417/02

Paper 2 (Practical Test A), maximum raw mark 80

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and candidates, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which Examiners were instructed to award marks. It does not indicate the details of the discussions that took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking began, which would have considered the acceptability of alternative answers.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the question paper and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

Cambridge will not enter into discussions about these mark schemes.

Cambridge is publishing the mark schemes for the October/November 2014 series for most Cambridge IGCSE®, Cambridge International A and AS Level components and some Cambridge O Level components.

The Role of TNF-TNFR2 Signal in Immunosuppressive Cells and its Therapeutic Implications Xin Chen,Magdalena Plebanski,2020-01-20 CD4 FoxP3 regulatory T cells Tregs play an indispensable role in the maintenance of immune homeostasis and prevention of autoimmune diseases and represent a major cellular mechanism of tumor immune evasion Targeting of Tregs has great potential in the treatment of some major human diseases including autoimmunity transplant rejection GvHD and cancer and are critical controllers of immunity to infectious pathogens It is expected they will also be central to the control of allergic and inflammatory diseases Understanding the biological pathways crucial for the regulation of Treg activity is a prerequisite for harnessing the immense therapeutic potential of Tregs TNF is generally believed to be a master pro inflammatory cytokine and anti TNF therapy has become a mainstay treatment for some autoimmune diseases However experimental evidence indicates that TNF preferentially activates Tregs resulting in the expansive proliferation phenotypic stability and enhanced suppressive capacity of these immune suppressors This effect of TNF is mediated by TNFR2 which is preferentially expressed by human and mouse Tregs Furthermore expression of TNFR2 is able to identify the most suppressive subset of Tregs Although counterintuitive and contradictory to earlier reports these findings have been supported by increasing experimental evidence from both human and mouse studies These recent studies revealing the Treg promoting effect of TNF not only leads to the redefinition of the immunological biology of this pleiotropic cytokine they are also helpful in designing novel therapies in the treatment of cancer autoimmune diseases and GvHD as well as enhancing current vaccines and immunomodulators In this article collection current knowledge on the cellular and molecular aspects of the Treg stimulatory effect of the TNF TNFR2 pathway will be discussed An insight of the physiological and pathological roles of such effects of TNF in an inflammatory reaction and immune response will be provided The seemingly contradictory Treg promoting effect of TNF and immunosuppressive effect of anti TNF therapy will be analyzed Recent efforts to translate such discoveries into therapeutic benefits will be introduced The novel strategies in the treatment of cancer and GvHD by down or up regulation of Treg activity through targeting TNFR2 will be highlighted In addition to Tregs TNFR2 has also been found to play a key role in the accumulation and immunosuppressive function of myeloid derived suppressive cells MDSCs and Mesenchymal stem cells MSCs Therefore the current understanding of the role of TNF TNFR2 signal in other type of immunosuppressive cells as well as its clinical and therapeutic implications have also been considered Neonatal health in low- and middle-income countries Britt Nakstad,Ashish K. Understanding Mechanisms underlying Lung Diseases: Powerful Tools for Translational Research Janette K. Burgess, Ramon Farre, Rebecca L. Heise, Jane Elizabeth Bourke, 2024-02-05 The mechanisms underlying acute and chronic lung diseases are complex reflecting the interplay between multiple cell types their microenvironment and exogenous challenges. While traditional in vitro cell culture approaches have been instrumental in advancing our knowledge of cellular signalling and function they typically lack the cell-cell and cell-matrix interactions that define the niche in which lung cell and tissue functions emerge. Implementing in vivo and ex vivo three-dimensional 3D models more realistically mimicking the in vivo cell extracellular matrix-ECM crosstalk should facilitate a considerable leap towards better understanding lung diseases and thus in investigating new pharmacological tools. We are experiencing a revolution in our understanding of the cell types that deposit and remodel ECM in the lung the dynamic spatial composition of the ECM and cell-cell interactions during disease and the influence of ECM and cell-derived cues on lung cell biology. In concert the ex vivo and in vitro models that are being used to examine the role of the 3D microenvironment of the cell in the lung are rapidly developing. The European Respiratory Society has partnered with Frontiers in Pharmacology to launch this research topic in conjunction with the ERS Research Seminar Innovative 3D models for understanding mechanisms underlying lung diseases powerful tools for translational research
