Digital & Print!

CODOMINANCE - BLOOD TYPES

In humans, three different alleles can create four different phenotypes. The alleles are A, B, and O, with the phenotypes are A, B, AB, and O. The alleles correspond to the carbohydrates found on the surface of a red blood cell. Since one blood type allele is inherited from each parent, there are several possible combinations that can be inherited.

Phenotype	Genotype
A	AA or AO
B	BB or BO
AB	AB
O	OO

Both A and B alleles are dominant, meaning that they determine an organism's phenotype. Because they are dominant, if one A allele and one B allele are inherited, then the blood type and genotype would be AB. This is an example of codominance, or when both alleles are expressed in the phenotype. However, the O allele is recessive, meaning that it does not affect or suppress the phenotypes unless there are two O alleles in a row. In this case, it has no effect on the phenotype, but it does not add to other alleles in a row, so it affects the phenotype.

INCOMPLETE DOMINANCE

In most inheritance genetics, one allele is more dominant than the other allele. However, in incomplete dominance, both alleles are not completely dominant over another as each allele contributes to incomplete dominance. This heterozygous genotype has traits from both parents that are incomplete dominance. These alleles contribute to incomplete dominance, rather than one fully determining the phenotype.

Incomplete dominance is a type of flower that exhibits incomplete dominance. The alleles for red (R) and white (r) flowers show incomplete dominance. Heterozygous (pink) flowers have pink flowers - an intermediate mix of red and white coloring. Complete the following Punnett squares and write the probabilities of the phenotypes as percentages.

1. Cross a pure flower with a white flower. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink

2. Cross two flowers with white flowers. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink

3. Cross two flowers with red flowers. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink

4. Cross two flowers with pink flowers. What is the probability the following phenotypes?

Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink
Red	White	Pink

CODOMINANCE - NON-MENDELIAN GENETICS

In incomplete dominance, if the genotype is heterozygous, it expresses traits from both alleles. In codominance, both traits in heterozygous are expressed. Both alleles are expressed equally in heterozygous individuals and express both traits at the same time.

1. All white chickens are crossed. What is the probability the following?

- White offspring
- Black offspring
- Intermediate offspring

White	White	White
White	White	White
White	White	White

2. Two black chickens are crossed. What is the probability the following?

- White offspring
- Black offspring
- Intermediate offspring

3. Two intermediate chickens are crossed. What is the probability the following?
