What is a probability distribution? A probability distribution is a statistical model that describes the likelihood of various outcomes in a given situation. It is a function that maps the possible values of a random variable to the probability of each value occurring. The most common type of probability distribution is the normal distribution, which is a bell-shaped curve that is symmetric around the mean. Other types of probability distributions include the binomial distribution, the Poisson distribution, the uniform distribution, and the exponential distribution. Each type of probability distribution has its own unique properties and is used to model different types of data.
