AP Daily Video 3.5 Part 1:

1.) Photosynthesis is the biological process that captures energy from the sun and produces sugars.

2.) How did photosynthesis change Earth's early atmosphere?

It was responsible for oxygen production.

3.) Pigments help transform light energy into chemical energy.

4.) This chemical energy is then temporarily stored as NADPH.

5.) Light-dependent reactions also produce another energy storing molecule called Calvin cycle.

6.) What happens to the NADPH and ATP produced by the light-dependent reactions?

It gets stored in calvin cycle.

7.) What process produces the oxygen released in the light-dependent reactions?

water hydrolysis.

AP Daily 3.5 Part 2 - Photosynthesis

8.) During photosynthesis, chlorophyll captures the energy from sunlight and converts it into high-energy electrons.

9.) These high energy electrons are used to make NADP⁺ and NADPH.

10.) Where are photo system II and III located?

Embedded in the internal membranes of chloroplasts.

11.) What is a photosystem?

Light capturing unit in a chloroplast's thylakoid membrane.

12.) The hydrogen molecules from the splitting of water are released into the thylakoid space, and are used to create an electrochemical/proton gradient.

13.) The electrons that were excited by the energy captured from sunlight pass through an electron transport chain.

14.) What is the function of PSII and PSIII?

PSII and PSIII pass high energy electrons to the ETC

15.) What is an electrochemical/proton gradient?

Difference in concentration of protons across the membrane.

16.) What can this proton gradient be used for?

Movement.

17.) What does the enzyme ATP Synthase do?

Innovative Strategies, Statistical Solutions and Simulations for Modern Clinical Trials Mark Chang, John Balser, Jim Roach, Robin Bliss, 2019-03-20

This is truly an outstanding book. It brings together all of the latest research in clinical trials methodology and how it can be applied to drug development. Chang et al provide applications to industry supported trials. This will allow statisticians in the industry community to take these methods seriously. Jay Herson Johns Hopkins University. The pharmaceutical industry's approach to drug discovery and development has rapidly transformed in the last decade from the more traditional Research and Development R D approach to a more innovative approach in which strategies are employed to compress and optimize the clinical development plan and associated timelines. However these strategies are generally being considered on an individual trial basis and not as part of a fully integrated overall development program. Such optimization at the trial level is somewhat near sighted and does not ensure cost time or development efficiency of the overall program. This book seeks to address this imbalance by establishing a statistical framework for overall global clinical development optimization and providing tactics and techniques to support such optimization including clinical trial simulations. Provides a statistical framework for achieve global optimization in each phase of the drug development process. Describes specific techniques to support optimization including adaptive designs, precision medicine, survival endpoints, dose finding and multiple testing. Gives practical approaches to handling missing data in clinical trials using SAS. Looks at key controversial issues from both a clinical and statistical perspective. Presents a generous number of case studies from multiple therapeutic areas that help motivate and illustrate the statistical methods introduced in the book. Puts great emphasis on software implementation of the statistical methods with multiple examples of software code both SAS and R. It is important for statisticians to possess a deep knowledge of the drug development process beyond statistical considerations. For these reasons this book incorporates both statistical and clinical medical perspectives.

Generation and Interpretation of Morphogen Gradients James Briscoe, Peter Anthony Lawrence, Jean-Paul Vincent, 2010

Signalling by morphogens such as the Hedgehog family, Notch, Wingless, Wnt and various growth factors is essential during embryogenesis. The establishment of concentration gradients of these morphogens plays a key role during developmental patterning in all multicellular organisms assuring that distinct cell tissue types and organs appear at the right place in the right time during embryogenesis. Regulation of morphogen synthesis, trafficking and diffusion are all known to play a part in setting up these gradients and a complex web of signaling mechanisms ensures that specific responses occur at the correct threshold concentration in the
