Evolution of NK-mediated target recognition under the pressure of physiologic or pathologic stimuli Massimo Vitale, Simona Sivori, Miguel López-Botet, Daniel Olive, 2015-03-23 Since their discovery NK cells have come out as potential tools to fight cancer and viruses. This finding early urged different groups to study the mechanisms governing NK cell function. The identification of the MHC I specific inhibitory receptors, i.e. KIRs, NKG2A and certain Ly49 molecules, allowed defining rather rapidly how NK cells could avoid self-aggression and how they could be directed towards targets that were forced by viral infection or tumor transformation to down regulate MHC I expression. In a second time, also the repertoire of surface activating receptors addressing NK cytotoxicity towards tumors and pathogens was mostly defined. In spite of the first findings, however, most recent studies may suggest that NK cells and their receptors might not have been evolved to kill tumor targets and perhaps they might have been only partially influenced in their evolution by the need of recognizing viruses. Indeed, certain NK receptors known to activate NK cell cytotoxicity, NKp30, DNAM 1, NKp80, can also participate at regulatory interactions occurring between NK and myeloid cells. In addition, a peculiar NK cell subset which intensively populates decidua during the first trimester of pregnancy through the engagement of specific receptors and the interaction with decidual DC produce chemokines and pro-angiogenic cytokines and induce Tregs. Thus, in this context, NK cells favor decidua vascularization and development of the semiallogeneic foetus in a tolerant environment. Viruses have nevertheless played an important role in shaping the NK cell receptor repertoire. Several studies have unveiled clues of the evolutionary struggle between these pathogens and NK cells. Different NK receptors, including NKp46, NKp30, NKp44, NKG2D, NKG2C, Ly49 and certain KIRs, have been demonstrated to recognize virus-encoded or virus-induced ligands. The expression of TLRs specifically recognizing microbial products, together with the unexpected role of KIR3DL2 in shuttling these products to TLR-containing endosomes, have also been documented in NK cells. On the other side, different viral immune evasion molecules have been shown to interfere with the expression of ligands for T or NK cell activating receptors. In addition, viral infections can occur in the reproductive stage of life cycle and may represent a serious threat for the species propagation. Thus, the control of viruses together with the maintenance of foetus during pregnancy should represent major evolutionary forces in shaping NK receptors. Along this line, the NK-mediated control of tumors should not be under the same evolutionary pressure as tumors mostly appear later in the life cycle and the recognition of tumor-encoded ligands may be less efficient as the NK cell receptors might have not been selected for such aim. This may be the reason why, although displaying strong antitumor activity in vitro, NK cells could hardly contain tumor burden in vivo. In addition, the pathogen-driven evolution of NK cell function may also favor the role of NK cells in the insurgence of immune-mediated diseases. This research topic will collect contributions that may clarify the relationships between the evolution of the NK receptors and their role in an efficient recognition of viruses and tumor cells or in immune-mediated diseases.

Cancer, Radiation Therapy, and the Market
Barbara Bridgman Perkins, 2017-08-16
Appraising cancer as a major medical market in the 2010s, Wall Street investors placed their bets on single technology treatment facilities costing 100-300 million each. Critics inside medicine called the widely publicized proton center boom crazy medicine and unsustainable public policy. There was no valid evidence they claimed that proton beams were more effective than less costly alternatives. But developers expected insurance to cover their centers staggeringly high costs and debts. Was speculation like this new to health care? Cancer Radiation Therapy and the Market shows how the radiation therapy specialty in the United States later called radiation oncology coevolved with its device industry throughout the twentieth century. Academic engineers and physicians acquired financing to develop increasingly powerful radiation devices, initiated companies to manufacture the devices competitively and designed hospital and freestanding procedure units to utilize them. In the process they incorporated market strategies into medical organization and practice. Although palliative benefits and striking tumor reductions fueled hopes of curing cancer, scientific research all too often found serious patient harm and disappointing beneficial impact on cancer survival. This thoroughly documented and provocative inquiry concludes that public health policy needs to re evaluate market driven high tech medicine and build evidence based health care systems.
