Certification Marks Jeffrey Belson,2002 Certification of web sites plays an important role in Internet security A certification mark is a guarantee that goods or services in connection with which the mark is used comply with certain standards Certification marks are classed as a special category of trade mark While they have existed under US and UK law and the laws of many European and other countries for almost 100 years there is currently no publication focusing specifically on the subject Certification Marks discusses the current state of law in this area placing it in an historical and commercial context Particular effort is made to examine several unresolved issues which look set to play important roles in the future especially EU certification and harmonisation and electronic certification

Certification and Collective Marks

Jeffrey Belson,2017-10-27 Certification and Collective Marks is a thoroughly updated and augmented edition of Certification Marks first published in 2002 This comprehensive study forms a wide ranging inquiry with comparisons of the certification and collective mark systems of the UK EU and US whilst also referring to other systems In addition to the laws and policies impacting ownership and use of these marks also addressed are their historical development registration and protection certifiers liability legal and commercial significance use in regulatory and technical standardization frameworks and emergent sui generis forms of certification namely ecolabels and electronic authentication marks in digital content This publication is especially timely in light of the advent of the EU certification mark and the controversial EU proposals to extend the Geographical Indications system to include non agri food products
