Construct Validation of Mathematics Achievement Haggai Kupermintz, 1999 This study investigated the validity of measures derived from a large scale multiple choice achievement test in mathematics using evidence from introspective think aloud protocols of students as they attempted test items In a small scale study of 21 local high schools students the authors sought to identify and describe cognitive processes underlying performance on test items and to examine their utility in supporting validity claims about the achievement dimensions tapped by the test The authors examined differences and similarities in solution strategies and sources of knowledge used to solve items representing five achievement dimensions The results provided further evidence for the plausibility of interpretations of the dimensions derived from a large scale factor analysis and support the conclusion that 12th grade mathematics achievement is factorially and cognitively complex Test scores that do not capture such complexity may mask important achievement information
