2. Air line to the fitting.
 - Build up air pressure in the system and check for leaks.
3. Open the drain valve in the main air reservoir and note the pressure retention in the service reservoirs.

PRESSURE PROTECTION VALVE

DESCRIPTION

The purpose of this valve is to close the air line to accessory components; clutch assist, engine brake, etc., when the air pressure in the main system falls to 450 kPa (65 psi). This provides sufficient pressure to release the spring brakes and apply the service brakes. When used with optional equipment, pressure setting may be of a different value. A large pressure adjusting cap with a metal hex retaining nut provides adjustment for the pressure setting.

ADJUSTMENT

The pressure setting is determined by the force of a spring inside the valve. Adjustment is made by turning the large adjusting cap (50) on the end of the valve (figure 4). The locknut (49) retaining the adjusting cap in position must be loosened before adjustment. Turning the adjusting cap clockwise raises the pressure setting and counter-clockwise lowers the pressure setting. Retighten the nut against the adjusting cap after making pressure setting adjustment. Be sure to hold the adjusting cap while tightening the nut against the cap.

OPERATING AND LEAKAGE TESTS

Bench Test

Remove the valve from the vehicle and perform the following tests: Mount the valve with a variable air supply and a small delivery volume. Connect a gage in line in each supply and delivery line. Apply supply pressure and increase until the gage in the delivery line equals that of the gage in the supply line. Close the supply line and vent the delivery line and note the supply pressure when the valve closes, which is indicated by the drop of pressure at the delivery line gage. If pressure setting is incorrect, adjust the valve. If the valve cannot be set to the proper value, it must be repaired or replaced.

Leakage Test

With supply pressure at approximately 690 kPa (100 psi), apply soap solution around mating areas and fittings. No leakage is permitted. Vent the delivery line and check for leakage with approximately 690 kPa (100 psi) at the supply line. No leakage is permitted. If valve does not function properly or leaks excessively, repair or replace the valve.

VALVE REPLACEMENT
