Period 3: 1754–1800

3.1 – Contextualizing Period 3

I. Global Context

- Period 3 begins during a time of intense global competition, especially between Britain and France, who were battling for empire and trade dominance around the world.
- The Seven Years' War (1756–1763) – called the French and Indian War in North America – was the spark for major changes in British colonial policy.
- European empires were not only fighting in Europe, but also in Africa, South Asia, and the Americas, reflecting a truly global conflict.

Big Picture: This period marks the transition from colonial rule to independence, and the formation of a new political system based on Enlightenment principles.

II. British Colonial Policy Shift

- After the French and Indian War, Britain had enormous war debt and a vast new empire to manage.
- Parliament sought to tighten control over the colonies and extract revenue, ending its earlier policy of salutary neglect.
- New taxes and regulations (e.g., Stamp Act, Townshend Acts) angered colonists and created tensions over representation, liberty, and sovereignty.

III. Growth of Colonial Resistance

- Inspired by Enlightenment thinkers like John Locke, colonists began asserting their natural rights to life, liberty, and property.
- Colonial leaders used print culture and boycotts to organize resistance (e.g., Sons of Liberty, Committees of Correspondence).
- British repression (e.g., Boston Massacre, Coercive Acts) pushed colonists from protest to revolution.

IV. War for Independence

- The American Revolution (1775–1783) was both:
  - A war for independence from imperial control.
  - A social and ideological struggle over the meaning of republicanism, freedom, and citizenship.
- While the war secured U.S. independence, it left questions about:
  - The rights of women
  - The future of slavery
  - The relationship between federal and state governments

V. Building a New Nation

- After independence, Americans experimented with government:
  - Articles of Confederation: A weak national government that struggled with taxation, defense, and interstate conflict.
  - U.S. Constitution (1787): Created a stronger federal system with separation of powers, checks and balances, and individual rights (via the Bill of Rights).
- Federalists and Anti-Federalists emerged, forming the roots of America's first political parties.
