The Space Race

For over a decade, the United States and the Soviet Union were engaged in a heated competition over space travel. The Soviet Union began in 1957 when the Soviet Union launched their first artificial satellite, Sputnik. The Soviet Union's success encouraged the rest of the American government. Dwight Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Richard Nixon all agreed that conquering outer space was very important. Both countries wanted to win the space race, especially regarding who would be the first to land on the moon.

Soviet cosmonauts successfully completed the first three crewed spaceflights over successive years. Kennedy wanted to beat the Soviets in the moon. Speaking about the prospect of sending astronauts to the moon in 1961, Kennedy said, "One small step forward for man, one giant leap for mankind." This simple space goal in our history will be more impressive to mankind, an more important for the long-range exploration of space. And none with be as difficult an experience for mankind."

By reaching the moon first in 1969, the United States won the space race. Soviet and U.S. scientists knew that losing the moon victory to the Soviet Union would be an extremely important media event. The Soviet Union had made significant progress with great interest. Companies and government leaders in both countries were under intense pressure to break through boundaries.
