Parliamentary Papers Great Britain.

Parliament. House of Commons, 1890 Sessional Papers British Columbia. Parliament, 1934 Reflexive Pronouns. The Acquisition of "Self-Forms" by German Learners of English as L2 Deborah Heinen, 2017-03-13 Seminar paper from the year 2016 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 10 University of Bonn language English abstract Prior linguistic knowledge it seems plausible that the acquisition of a second language can be influenced by the learner's knowledge of structures and rules of his or her first language. Especially similarities between languages are probably tending to either facilitate the learning process or to impede it cf Gundel Tarone 1994: 87. This cross linguistic influence is called language transfer which can be described as negative when the application of L1 structures or rules on a L2 utterance leads to a linguistically incorrect expression cf Saville Troike 2012: 19. Given the fact that similarities between languages might impede the learning process of the L2 the work in hand takes a closer look at reflexive pronouns in English and German. As self forms in English and sich forms in German look quite similar but differ in their use they appear as a possible source of error for German learners of English. Therefore the leading question of the paper is whether L2 English learners recognize the differences in the use of self forms in English and the use of sich in German. The hypothesis is that based on their L1 knowledge German learners of English are likely to make use of reflexive pronouns more often than necessary. In other words it is assumed that a negative language transfer is likely to occur due to the formal similarities between the L1 and L2. Further information on the theoretical basis of the study will be given in the second chapter followed by the part on methodology that includes information on the informants, the research instruments and the data collection procedure. In the following two chapters the results of the study will be presented and with regard to possible explanations and limitations discussed. Finally the main findings of the paper will be summarized. The reason for conducting this study is in the first place that the problem of language transfer is of great importance for the learner's learning process of English as L2. Especially teachers of English should be aware of common sources of error so they might be able to predict possible linguistic problems and support their students at their best to avoid such mistakes cf Odlin 1990: 4. Furthermore previous studies in the field of cross linguistic examinations on reflexive pronouns mainly referred to binding conditions and the like whereas this paper deals with the frequency and correct application of reflexives by learners of English as L2 English Language and Literature Teaching in India S. R. Ganguly,L. S. Ramaiah,2000 Description English came to India with the East India Company in the seventeenth century Lord Wellesley consolidated the rule of the East India Company around 1820 with his victories over the Marathas and Tipu Sultan Hence the times were propitious for the introduction of English language in India in education and administration The two landmarks for the English Language Teaching in India were the famous Minute on Indian Education 1835 by Thomas Babington Macaulay and The Wood's Despatch 1858 by Charles Wood Thereafter English became the most important subject of higher study in India Much was written about the study and teaching of English Language and Literature in India both by the natives and English men English Language teaching even after achieving Independence 1947 is continuing as an important subject of study as India's window on the world In spite of the importance of the subject there has been no bibliographical control Bibliography and documentation are important tools to provide the total intellectual output that was written and published in the field They reveal the strengths and weaknesses of the subject They are the pathfinders for the further study and research of the study Lack of these tools is a bane to the teachers and scholars There is no bibliography so far on English Language and Literature teaching in India The editors with their long experience at CIEFL undertook this arduous work to fill in the gap It is a happy thing that this reference tool is published on the occasion of the completion of 40 years of the establishment of the Central Institute of English and Foreign Languages Hyderabad and the Silver Jubilee of its deemed university status It is hoped that this bibliography will be of great help to teachers students and scholars in the field of ELLT Assessment in Singapore: Perspectives for classroom practice Poh Guan Toh, See Cheng Leong,2014
