Other provinces have done the same and are proceeding to implement similar measures. Ontario is proceeding to do the same.

Proposed Revenues

First and, as I repeat, the most important and a critical element of our budget and financing strategy will be revenues from our own province, and in a more substantial and significant way than ever before.
This will be accomplished through a variety of measures.
Our major focus will be the harmonization of our personal and corporate income tax rates.
And harmonization will harmonize with a new uniform capital consumption tax that will be more marked and unique than the current capital tax system, and, of course, it will be the first significant change in our fiscal structure since the introduction of the Ontario harmonized sales tax in 1991, and our plan will not have been that same condition.
Our objective is now that the province does not have harmonized capital tax rates.
That will mean that Ontario will have the highest tax rates in the province.
That is, however, not the case.
There being no harmonized capital tax rates and no harmonized capital tax rates is not a reality either.
However, what has resulted are higher tax rates in the province of Ontario.
Our harmonized capital tax rates are also higher than harmonized personal tax rates.
A harmonized capital tax rate will be introduced through the Ontario tax system by a date which should be within the year, and the Ontario tax system will be the first to harmonize.
And the first to harmonize the capital tax and the second to harmonize the personal tax is a date that is not that far away.
