School of Nursing,2012 The purpose of this quantitative study was to determine if Assessment Technologies

Institute's ATI comprehensive predictor accurately predicts student results on the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses NCLEX RN for graduates of an Associate Degree nurse program at a community college in the Northwestern part of North Carolina. The study was also used to determine the feasibility of the School of Nursing SON continuing to purchase the ATI standardized testing products for student use. This study evaluated the comprehensive predictor scores and first time pass fail rates for graduates N 285 from 2007 to 2011. All data was analyzed using IBM Statistical Package for the Social Sciences SPSS version 20 software as well as a predictive accuracy spreadsheet provided by ATI to determine the overall predictive reliability. The mean on the predictor is significantly different for those who passed versus those who failed which indicated that ATI's comprehensive predictor is predictive of success or failure on the NCLEX RN for graduates of the Associate Degree Nurse program at the college p 0.000.

Early Identification of At-risk LPN-to-RN Students Lisa K. Hawthorne, 2021 Nurse education programs are implementing standardized assessments without evaluating their effectiveness. Graduates of associate degree nursing programs continue to be unsuccessful with licensure examinations despite standardized testing and stronger admission criteria. This problem is also prevalent for LPN to RN education programs due to a lack of research on this group of graduates who by all accounts should be successful in nursing education based on their work experience and prior nursing education. Findings of this quantitative non experimental descriptive correlational study are presented to determine the effectiveness of standardized testing from Assessment Technologies Institute ATI as it relates to identifying at risk LPN RN students enrolled in two mid western private colleges and predicting their success on the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses NCLEX RN. The sample consisted of 182 students who took the ATI registered nursing RN comprehensive predictor assessment between November 2009 and December 2011. Demographic data and scores on the ATI RN Fundamentals Assessment composite nursing process and thinking scores were compared with performance on the ATI comprehensive predictor and NCLEX RN results. Study findings indicate a statistically significant association between the standardized testing scores and pass rates on the NCLEX RN examination but limited relevance of student characteristics.

A Correlational Study on Critical Thinking in Nursing as an Outcome Variable for Success Rebecca Porter, 2017 Critical thinking is a required curricular outcome for nursing education however the literature shows a gap related to valid and reliable tools to measure critical thinking specific to nursing and relating that critical thinking measurement to meaningful outcomes. This study examined critical thinking scores as measured by Assessment Technologies Institute ATI Critical Thinking Exam CTE to determine if a statistically significant predictive association existed between critical thinking scores successful Associate of Science in Nursing ASN program completion and National Certification Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses NCLEX RN pass rates. The research was conducted in a semi urban hospital based ASN program and included 550 students obtained by convenience sampling in a retrospective predictive correlational study. Logistical analysis was conducted to determine if any relationships existed.

between the variables of interest while controlling for confounding variables such as nursing course grade point average GPA and preadmission ATI Test of Essential Academic Skills TEAS scores Critical thinking was found to be a positive predictor of student success program completion  $p = .012$  NCLEX success  $p = .002$  as were TEAS program completion  $p = .003$  NCLEX success  $p = .001$  and nursing course GPA NCLEX success  $p = .001$  However cumulative effects for the three variables were not found to increase the predictive power of the model and none of the variables were deemed good predictors of failure

Baccalaureate Nursing Student Success on the First Attempt of the NCLEX-RN Exam Phillip J. Moore, Roberta L. Jones, 2010 This study was conducted to determine if success on the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses NCLEX RN was correlated with a specific combination of academic variables A retrospective nonexperimental correlation design was utilized which included both descriptive and inferential statistical procedures to determine positive correlation Data was collected from the academic records of baccalaureate nursing students  $N = 225$  who attended and completed the traditional and accelerated programs between 2005 and 2009 Independent academic variables included both prerequisite and nursing courses as well as prerequisite nursing and cumulative GPAs and ATI RN predictor test score Eighteen of the 30 independent variables were found to correlate with NCLEX RN success Among those 18 correlating variables seven were noted to have a stronger correlation Understanding the aspects of a nursing program that demonstrates correlation provides the nursing students educators and the profession as a whole opportunity to increase the possibility of success

The Predictive Value of an External Testing Program Used in One College of Nursing for First Time NCLEX-RN Examination Outcomes Jaime Todd Carter, Valdosta State University. Department of Nursing, 2005 This study focused on associate degree nursing students from one community college in southern Georgia between 2001 2004 to determine whether Educational Resources Incorporated scores ERI specifically the Nursing Entrance Test NET and the RN Assess Test can be used to predict passage on the NCLEX RN Findings demonstrated that the RN Assess Test was useful in predicting first time success on the NCLEX RN

Identifying Predictors of Success for the Computerized NCLEX-RN in Associate Degree Nursing Graduates Tina Marie Kline, 2010 Failure of the NCLEX RN is a significant problem with a farther reaching impact than just the individual student and program of nursing Every student who is unsuccessful on the exam is one less registered nurse to provide patient care therefore increasing NCLEX RN pass rates is essential to addressing the ongoing nursing shortage The purpose of this study was to determine the relationship among nursing curriculum grade point average performance in the biological science courses performance in the theory portion of fundamentals and medical surgical nursing courses performance on the Assessment Technologies Institute RN comprehensive predictor examination and role transition setting and success on the NCLEX RN examination Approval was obtained from the governing institution and community college s internal review board to conduct a record review of the graduating nursing classes Logistical regression was then performed to identify significant predictors of NCLEX success including ACT and COMPASS reading scores biological science GPA performance in medical surgical nursing courses and ATI comprehensive predictor performance Statistical analysis indicated that ACT COMPASS reading scores nursing curriculum and biological science GPA and ATI comprehensive predictor performance were significant predictors of NCLEX RN performance
