15/3 Lesson 9

World Literature, science, and ethics (2)

I. Objective today:

- I. Continue to learn about how literature and ethics can be related (through relevant cognitive science research).

II. Nussbaum, Love's Knowledge, 1990.

- I. Literature is indispensable for ethics. Why?

For ethics, (a) not only the content but the form of discussion matters,

(b) the concrete situation matters (otherwise we don't know what ethical rules apply here),

(c) therefore, literature, a form that can richly illustrate the concrete situation, matters.

(a) The form matters:

- Our life is never simply presented as it is by a text, but always represented as something.

(b) The concrete situation matters:

- Aristotle: an ideal intermediate state between the excess and the deficiency
- What counts as intermediate?

But this [to hit the intermediate] is no doubt difficult, and especially in individual cases; for it is not easy to determine both how and with whom and on what provocation and how long one should be angry, for we too sometimes praise those who fall short and call them good-tempered, but sometimes we praise those who get angry and call them manly. The man, however, who deviates little from goodness is not blamed, whether he does so in the direction of the more or of the less, but only the man who deviates more widely, for he does not fail to be noticed. But up to what point and to what extent a man must deviate before he becomes blameworthy it is not easy to determine by reasoning, any more than anything else that is perceived by the senses, such things depend on particular facts, and the decision rests with perception. (Aristotle, The Nicomachean Ethics)

- Rules are not enough: Relevance, ordering, weighting, formulation? New, unexpected cases?

(c) Literature matters

- Not about length, but ambiguity: Concrete situations in real moral life are ambiguous, how we categorize the world is also ambiguous.
