

DNA REPLICATION STUDY-GUIDE

DNA REPLICATION

01 ENZYMES

Replication involves an assembly of enzymes, among which DNA polymerase is the most important. It is a polymerase, which means it is responsible for putting nucleotides together to form a polymer.

- DNA polymerase (DNA pol) is the enzyme responsible for synthesizing the double helix by joining nucleotides together, creating the replication fork.

02 DIRECTIONALITY

Because DNA polymerase III can only add nucleotides to the 3' end of a growing strand, synthesis is directional. This is why the leading strand is synthesized continuously towards the replication fork, while the lagging strand is synthesized discontinuously away from the fork as Okazaki fragments.

The leading strand is synthesized continuously towards the replication fork, while the lagging strand is synthesized discontinuously away from the fork as Okazaki fragments.

03 PROOFREADING

DNA polymerase III (Pol III) has a proofreading function. It can remove a mismatched nucleotide and replace it with the correct one. This ensures that the newly synthesized strand is accurate.

02 DNA BASE SEQUENCE

The order of bases in a DNA molecule is its base sequence. Each triplet of bases (codon) corresponds to a specific amino acid sequence, determining the structure and function of proteins.

Each triplet of bases (codon) corresponds to a specific amino acid sequence, determining the structure and function of proteins.

03 SEMI-CONSERVATIVE

When a cell divides, DNA replication is semi-conservative. Each new DNA molecule consists of one original (parental) strand and one newly synthesized strand.

01 DNA STRUCTURE

DNA is a double-stranded molecule composed of nucleotides, each containing a phosphate group, a deoxyribose sugar, and a nitrogenous base.

The two strands run antiparallel (5' to 3' and 3' to 5') and are held together by hydrogen bonds between complementary base pairs (Adenine with Thymine, Guanine with Cytosine). The sugar-phosphate backbone gives DNA structural stability and protects the genetic code stored in the base sequence.

04 ENZYMES

Specialized enzymes help coordinate replication.

- Helicase breaks the double helix, creating the replication fork.
- DNA polymerase (DNA pol) adds nucleotides to the growing strand, checking for errors as it goes.

Other enzymes support strand separation and reconnection of fragments. These proteins ensure that DNA replication is accurate and that the genetic code is preserved.

05 KEY TERMS

Nucleotide
Basic unit of DNA, composed of a phosphate, deoxyribose sugar, and nitrogenous base.

Semi-conservative replication
Each new DNA molecule contains one original strand.

Template strand
The original DNA strand used to synthesize a complementary copy.

Antiparallel
Strands run in opposite directions (5' to 3' and 3' to 5').

Helicase
Enzyme that breaks the double helix.

DNA Polymerase
Enzyme that synthesizes the new DNA strand by adding nucleotides.
