

Public Warehouses...

- Public warehouses are operated by a warehouse keeper, for storing goods placed under the customs warehouse procedure by other traders, who are also known as depositors.
- A public warehouse charges clients a basic fee for handling and storage.
- In the case of handling, the charge is based on the number of cases or pounds handled.
- For storage, the charge is assessed on the number of cases or weight in storage during the month.
- Such charges normally exceed the cost of private warehousing if adequate private facility volume exists.
- However, when economies of scale are not possible in a private facility, public warehousing may be a low-cost alternative.
