

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU TOW

BEFORE YOU BUY

If you are selecting a vehicle that will be used for towing, you should determine the approximate weight of the trailer you intend to tow, including the weight of any additional cargo and fluids that you will be carrying in the trailer. Also be sure the vehicle has the proper optional equipment (see page 115). Keep in mind that performance can be severely compromised in fully loaded when minimum acceptable powertrain combination is selected. Consider purchasing a vehicle with a more powerful engine.

BRAKES

Many states require a separate braking system on trailers with a loaded weight of more than 1,500 pounds. For your safety, Ford Motor Company recommends that a separate functional brake system be used on any towed vehicle, including those fully-braked or tow-bar braked. There are two basic types of brake systems designed to activate trailer brakes:

1. Electronically-Controlled Brakes usually provide automatic and manual control of trailer brakes. They require that the tow vehicle be equipped with a controlling device and additional wiring for electrical power. These brakes typically have a control line installed within reach of the driver and can be applied manually or automatically.
2. B surge Brakes are independent hydraulic brakes activated by a master cylinder at the junction of the hitch and trailer tongue. They are not controlled by the hydraulic fluid in the tow vehicle's brake system, and the tow vehicle's hydraulic system should never be connected directly to the trailer's hydraulic system.

Be sure your trailer brakes conform to all applicable state regulations. (See Towing Tips on back cover for additional braking information.)

TRAILER LAMPS

Make sure the trailer is equipped with lights that conform to all applicable government regulations. The trailer lighting system should not be connected directly to the lighting system of the vehicle. See a local recreational vehicle dealer or rental trailer agency for correct wiring and setup for the trailer and heavy-duty battery.

AFTER YOU BUY

Before heading out on a trip, check your vehicle's Owner Guide for break-in and service-duty maintenance schedules and how a trailer will affect your vehicle has been driven at least 100 miles. Be sure to have your fully loaded vehicle (including passengers) and trailer weighed on a not-to-exceed critical weight limits (see page 30). If any of these limits are exceeded, cargo should be removed from the vehicle until trailer until all weights are within the specified limits.

SAFETY CHAINS

- Always use safety chains when towing. Safety chains are used to retain connection between the towing and towed vehicle in the event of separation of the hitch coupling or ball.
- Use cross chains under the trailer tongue(s) to prevent the tongue from contacting the ground if a separation occurs. Allow only enough slack to permit full turning – be sure they do not drag on the pavement.
- When using a frame-mounted hitch, attach the safety chains to the frame-mounted hitch using the recommendations supplied by the hitch manufacturer.
- See your vehicle's Owner Guide for safety chain attachment information.
- For rental trailers, follow rental agency instructions for hookup of safety chains.

TRAILER WIRING HARNESS

Some vehicles equipped with a factory-installed Trailer Towing Package include a trailer wiring harness and a wiring kit. This kit includes one or more "jump" harnesses to connect to your trailer wiring (wired-to-wire) and installation instructions.

Refer to chart on page 114 for standard and optional wiring harnesses.
