History of the Government

For most of the country's history, the government has been run by a small group of people who were not elected. These people were called the "elite." They controlled the government and made decisions that affected the rest of the country. This system was called "oligarchy." In 1776, the American Revolution began. The colonists wanted to be free from the control of the elite. They fought for independence and won. After the war, the United States was formed. The new government was run by elected officials. This system was called "democracy." Over time, the government has changed and evolved. It has become more representative of the people it serves.

George Washington and Thomas Jefferson

Current Government Structure

The current government structure is a mix of the old and the new. It still has some elements of the oligarchy, but it is more representative of the people. The president is elected by the people, but the Congress is still run by a small group of people. The Supreme Court is also run by a small group of people. The government is still controlled by a small group of people, but it is more representative of the people it serves.
