Phone surveillance, from scratch: Novel sample design features of the nationally representative Myanmar Household Welfare Survey (MHWS) Myanmar Agriculture Policy Support Activity (MAPSA), 2022-04-04 The first round of the Myanmar Household Welfare Survey MHWS a nationwide phone panel consisting of 12 100 households was implemented between December 2021 and February 2022. The objective of the survey was to collect data on a wide range of household and individual welfare indicators including wealth livelihoods unemployment food insecurity diet quality health shocks and coping strategies in a country exceptionally hard hit by conflict severe economic collapse and several damaging waves of COVID 19. The respondents interviewed in the MHWS were purposely selected from a large phone database aimed at being representative at the region state level and urban rural level in Myanmar. In this paper we discuss two key steps taken to ensure that the MHWS is nationally and subnationally representative at the state region and urban rural level. First we used a quota based sampling strategy by setting survey quotas for respondents geography education farming status gender and rural urban residence. This sampling strategy is used to address the well known drawbacks of phone survey samples e.g. the over sampling of more educated respondents and the survey's particular interest in over sampling farm households and equally sampling men and women. Second we constructed household population and individual level weighting factors to further ensure that the survey generates nationally and subnationally representative statistics. To assess the effectiveness of these two strategies on achieving representativeness and consistency with previous surveys we compare results from the MHWS to earlier nationally representative datasets focusing on sample sizes of interviewed households for each state region and on education levels farm non farm occupation urban rural residence as well as respondents housing characteristics which are unlikely to change substantially over short periods of time. We show that the phone based MHWS has broader geographical coverage than previous national surveys reaching 310 of Myanmar's 330 townships. Moreover our sampling approach was generally effective in reducing the education bias of phone surveys except for a handful of states regions. The

MHWS is also unique in providing equal representation of male and female respondents Additionally the MHWS sampling and weighting strategies produce statistics on key indicators that closely mirror results from the two most recent national surveys in Myanmar Overall the results suggest that these strategies are successful in generating a subnationally representative phone survey that collected data on a rich array of household welfare indicators in exceptionally difficult political and economic circumstances

Home economics Sacha Hepburn, 2022-08-16 Domestic service has long been one of the largest forms of urban employment across southern Africa

Home economics provides the first comprehensive history of this essential sector in the decades following independence and the end of apartheid. Focusing on Lusaka and drawing wider comparisons, the book traces how Black workers and employers adapted existing models of domestic service as part of broader responses to changing gendered employment patterns, economic decline and endemic poverty. It reveals how kin-based domestic service gradually displaced wage labour and how women and girl workers came to dominate kin-based and waged domestic service with profound consequences for labour regulation and worker organising. Theoretically innovative and empirically rich, the book provides essential insights into debates about gender, work and urban economies that are critical to understanding southern Africa's post-colonial and post-apartheid history.

Economic Development Christopher Cramer, John Sender, Arkebe Oqubay, 2020-06-10 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence. It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations. Unevenness and inequalities form a central fact of African economic experiences. This book challenges conventional wisdoms about economic performance and possible policies for economic development in African countries using the striking variation in economic performance as a starting point. African Economic Development: Evidence, Theory, and Policy highlights not only difference between countries but also variation within countries. It focuses on issues relating to gender, class, and ethnic identity such as neo-natal mortality, school dropout, and horticultural and agribusiness exports Variations in these areas point to opportunities for changing performance reducing reducing inequalities learning from other policy experiences and escaping the ties of structure and the legacies of a colonial past African Economic Development rejects teleological illusions and Eurocentric prejudice criticizing a range of orthodox and heterodox economists for their cavalier attitude to evidence Instead it shows that seeing the contradictions of capitalism for what they are fundamental and enduring may help policy officials protect themselves against the misleading idea that development can be expected to be a smooth linear process or that it would be if certain impediments were removed Drawing on decades of research and policy experience this book combines careful use of available evidence from a range of African countries with economic insights to make the policy case for specific types of public sector investment Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter and New York Druggists' Price Current, 1931-07 Vols include the proceedings some summarized some official stenographic reports of the National Wholesale Druggists Association called 18 1882 Western Wholesale Druggists Association and of other similar organizations Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1993 Books in Print, 1981
