How Free Trade Agreements and Customs Unions Differ?

Both free trade agreements and customs unions are trade agreements between trading nations. In a free trade agreement, member nations trade freely among themselves. Each nation, however, sets its own trade policy with non-member nations. In a customs union, member nations trade freely with each other and with non-member nations. They also set a common trade policy with non-member nations.

What is NAFTA?

The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) is a trade agreement signed by Mexico, Canada, and the United States. It was signed in 1994 and entered into force in 1994. It is a free trade agreement between three nations and is the largest free trade agreement in the world. It covers a wide range of trade issues, including trade in goods, services, and intellectual property. It also covers trade in investment and trade in labor. The agreement has been a success for all three nations. It has led to a significant increase in trade between the three nations and has led to a significant increase in economic growth in all three nations.
