Agricultural Sciences Paper Grade November 2014:

Recent Investigations of Ergot Alkaloids Incorporated into Plant and/or Animal Systems Darrin Smith, James Levi Klotz, 2015-07-01 Ergot alkaloids produced by fungi have a basic chemical structure but different chemical moieties at substituent sites result in various forms of alkaloids that are distinguishable from one another. Since the ergoline ring structure found in ergot alkaloids is similar to that of biogenic amines neurotransmitters, a variety of physiological effects can result after ingestion. Research involving ergot alkaloids is an increasingly important global issue as more governments pass laws that limit permissible levels of ergot alkaloids in both foodstuffs and feedstuffs. Regardless of whether these compounds are found directly in foodstuffs or in feed plants given to forage animals (i.e. cattle, horses, sheep, and goats), introduction of these compounds can complicate the food supply. In addition, toxicosis resulting from alkaloids can be a costly hindrance with mounting annual production losses associated with forage animal production systems that impact other agricultural and food-based industries. Recent advances for the analysis of these compounds in different matrices, as well as the understanding of the role these compounds play in distinct biological pathways, have begun to help address the issue. This Research Topic, Recent Investigations of Ergot Alkaloids Incorporated into Plant and/or Animal Systems, has developed a novel platform where different groups share recent data in their investigations with ergot alkaloids. The presented collection of articles emphasizes the complexity of this issue and the multiple approaches necessary to resolve the global ergot alkaloid challenges.

Lessons for REDD+ benefit-sharing mechanisms from anti-corruption measures in Indonesia Shintia Dian Arwida, Sofi Mardiah, Cecilia Luttrell, 2015-05-19      Improving Animal Welfare through Genetic Selection Wendy Mercedes Rauw, 2016-07-12 In livestock species, breeding goals are aimed primarily at improvement of production traits. However, there are a number of examples where selection for high production efficiency has resulted in reduced welfare through unfavorable outcomes in health and fitness characteristics. These effects raise questions about what is ethically acceptable in animal breeding. Welfare problems may be experienced when physiological balance is disturbed by genetic selection for high production alone by a mismatch between the environmental challenges and the range of coping responses available to an animal, or from a mismatch between the animal's needs and their degree of satisfaction. This may be resolved by either improving the environment to support the animal, but also by providing the animal through genetic selection with means to adapt to the production environment. The Standing Committee of the European Convention for the Protection of Animals kept for Farming Purposes emphasizes that breeding goals should include health and welfare. The Farm Animal Welfare Council pleads for a greater emphasis in breeding programs on traits associated with good welfare. However, although breeding goals in most farm animal species have been broadened beyond production traits to include functional traits, behavioral traits are rarely included despite their potential to improve animal production and welfare. It is the goal of the present Research Topic to bring together experimental and theoretical research focusing on the genetics of welfare traits and the possibility to improve animal welfare through selection This topic presents an overview of the relationship between selection for high production and livestock robustness examples of improving robustness through the introduction of novel traits in livestock breeding and a discussion on selection methods to address welfare issues The discussion on sustainability of breeding practices is very alive today and will remain to be an important part of the debate in the future Technological Innovation for Sustainable Development Noppakun Sanpo,Jirasak Tharajak,Paisan Kanthang,2019-05-13 9th RMUTP International Conference on Science Technology and Innovation for Sustainable Development 9th RMUTP ICON SCi 2018 Synthetics, Mineral Oils, and Bio-Based Lubricants Leslie R.
