

Editorial: An Introduction

Journal of Aging Studies is at the forefront of the movement toward improving the lives of older adults. The development of the field reflects a shift in emphasis from a biomedical and gerontological view of aging to a more social and community-centered perspective. The field has moved away from the biomedical model of aging and toward a social model that emphasizes the importance of social relationships and the social context of aging. This shift has led to a greater emphasis on the social determinants of health and well-being, and to a greater appreciation of the social and community contexts in which aging occurs. This shift has led to a greater emphasis on the social and community contexts in which aging occurs.

This issue of the journal is the result of a special call for papers on the theme of "Promoting Healthy Aging: The Role of Social Support." The theme reflects the growing recognition that social support is a key factor in promoting healthy aging.
