Use

The projectile of this cartridge contains a specially producing agent for use against enemy personnel.

Construction

The projectile consists of a hollow steel forging with a pointed base, a streamlined ogive, and gilding metal rotating band. A brass core is welded to the base of the projectile for added protection against the entrance of hot gases from the propelling charge during firing.

The projectile cavity is filled with R (residual) or M (shaded residual) in liquid form. A steel case adapter, having a female base thread, with a press fitted booster casing is threaded into the nose of the projectile providing a seal for the filler. A tetraethyl lead charge is placed inside the booster casing and a PC base threaded into the adapter. The cartridge case contains a percussion primer assembly and seven individually tagged and numbered propelling charge increments. The base of the cartridge case is drilled and the primer assembly pressed into the base. The percussion primer assembly consists of a percussion igniter element and a perforated flash tube containing black powder. The seven numbered increment bags are tied together, in numerical order, with acrylic cord. These are assembled
