■ ■ ■ Noncommutative geometry—noncommutative geometry (NCG) is a generalization of algebraic geometry to the setting where the coordinates of the space do not commute. It is a branch of mathematics that has been developed in the last few decades. It is a generalization of algebraic geometry to the setting where the coordinates of the space do not commute. ■ Their groundbreaking research is the cornerstone for several other techniques that are based on computing protein fold angles for the determination of a protein's native folded conformation as general flexibility and protein structure prediction. The research team has a long history of collaborative work with numerous other scientists in various fields of engineering, computing, and mathematics, and is currently working on several other projects.
