History of the Government

For most of the country's history, the government has been run by a small group of people who were not elected. These people were called the "elite." They controlled the government and the economy. They were often from the same social class and had similar backgrounds. This led to a lack of diversity in the government. In the early 1900s, there was a movement to change this. This movement was called the Progressive Movement. It was led by people like Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt. They believed that the government should be more representative of the people. They also believed that the government should be more involved in the economy to help the poor and the working class.

Government Structure

The government is divided into three branches: the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. The executive branch is responsible for carrying out the laws. The legislative branch is responsible for making laws. The judicial branch is responsible for interpreting the laws. The president is the head of the executive branch. Congress is the head of the legislative branch. The Supreme Court is the head of the judicial branch.
