CELL REPRODUCTIONSection 18-3: Cell Division

Read the passage below, which covers topics from your textbook. Answer the questions that follow.

Interphase is a nonreproductive phase that is divided into four phases: prophase, metaphase, anaphase, and telophase. Prophase is the first phase of mitosis. Prophase begins with the dissolving and re-forming of DNA into and around chromosomes that's an increase in their hypercondensation. During the 4 phase, each chromosome is copied. The two copies of each chromosome, called sister chromatids, are connected to each another by two structures. At the same time, centrioles and the new two centrosomes form and separate. Prophase actually spans all four mitotic stages up to the disappearance of the nuclear envelope. The centrosomes move toward opposite poles of the cell and spindle fibers radiate from the centrosomes to prepare for anaphase.

Metaphase is the second phase of mitosis. During metaphase, chromosomes move onto the chromosome to the center of the dividing cell.

Anaphase is the third phase of mitosis. Sister chromatids separate at the centrosomes and move toward opposite poles of the dividing cell. After the chromatids separate, they are considered to be individual chromosomes.

Telophase is the fourth phase of mitosis. Sister chromatids separate again, opposite ends of the cell and spindle fibers disappear. Nuclear envelopes reform, a low highly folded chromatin state. A nuclear envelope forms around each set of chromosomes, and a nucleolus forms in each of the newly forming cells.

Cytokinesis is concurrent with the phase of telophase. While the last nonreproductive phase occurs prior to the reproductive phase.

18-3-1: Prophase and Metaphase

Write a short paragraph describing the subsequent mitotic stages of telophase and cytokinesis. Mention important elements of mitosis.
